Here are some questions to help get you started with your discussion.

The Horse and His Boy Chapter 10:

- ❖ Why does Aravis say they might not have come all this way if they don't reach Anvard in time?
- ❖ Why does Shasta hold his tongue when Bree is already galloping as fast as he can? Was it the right action?
- ❖ What do you think it means that another lion is after them now?
- ❖ Why is Shasta's first instinct to help?
- ❖ Why is the lion's focus on Aravis?
- ❖ Where does Shasta find the courage to confront the lion now?
- ❖ Why does the lion flee after Shasta yells at it?
- ❖ How would you react to having to give more than your all for a mission? What would make you do it?
- ❖ Why does the hermit call the horses "cousins"?
- ❖ Why didn't the lion catch Aravis out of her saddle?
- ❖ What do you think of the Hermit's statement on luck? Do you agree?
- ❖ Why is it now that Aravis sees who Shasta truly is?
- ❖ Aravis tells Bree that it would be best for them to stay in Narnia and apologize to Shasta. Do you agree?
- ❖ Why does the Hermit call Bree to see himself as not as great as he thought he was. Do you agree? Does this apply to everyone?
